

How to make a charitable gift with life insurance

Charitable gifts may also be made through beneficiary designations in life insurance policies. Donating a paid-up policy you no longer need, or purchasing a new policy and naming Unbound as the owner and/or beneficiary, is a cost effective way to provide a meaningful gift in support of your sponsored friend and our program initiatives worldwide.

If you do own a paid-up policy that you no longer need, by transferring beneficiary status and ownership to unbound, in most cases your gift will qualify for a charitable tax deduction. A change in beneficiary designation is relatively easy. Contact your life insurance company and ask for appropriate change of beneficiary form. This information is commonly required on a change of beneficiary form. Contact us using the number or email shown below if you need additional information or have any questions:
